

GET INVOLVED WITH EARLY WORDS

Early Words/Premiers mots provides healthcare professionals with resources, training and books so they can deliver early literacy support to families with babies and young children 5 and under.

This simple but effective program is easily integrated into the way healthcare professionals already interact with families. We are able to offer this program thanks to funders who share our vision for a more literate Canada.

Why?

Evidence shows that children whose families receive early literacy guidance as part of well-child healthcare visits are 2.5 times as likely to be read to frequently. And this is important because kids who are exposed to lots of words from loving adults in the years before age five are more likely to arrive at school ready to learn to read themselves.

Our Goal:

To make early literacy guidance as routine at healthcare visits as weighing and measuring babies and young children.

Who can apply to participate in Early Words?

Health clinics and hospitals across Canada who routinely see families with children from newborn to age five that face barriers to learning. This might include families where the parents struggle with literacy. Or families that can't easily access children's books or early childhood programs. Maybe they are new to Canada, or experiencing economic hardship or other challenges.
